

Dear Families and Staff;

Thank you for your continued patience as we work through all challenges of the Pandemic, a snowy winter, and the everyday problems that manifest. Today, I met with the Principals and put in place a plan to have afternoon sessions when inclement weather forces a virtual day. I understand that some will applaud this decision, while others will be upset by it. The decision is being made in the best interest of the students in order to give them as much instructional time as possible, especially considering how much instructional time has been lost because of the pandemic this year. In addition, given that it has been a snowy winter and over the last two years we have gotten significant snow well into March, it is prudent to preserve our remaining snow days. Thank you again for your understanding and patience.
