

Good Afternoon,

Today's snowstorm came as an unpleasant surprise! The weather forecast called for a light coating of no more than an inch of snow followed by rain. Given the forecast there was no reason for a virtual day. Unfortunately, the unexpectedly heavy snowfall occurred after students were in the building and beyond a time when we could have arranged for an early dismissal. After dismissal at 12:45 three buses became stuck leaving Governor Livingston. One bus did become trapped in a snowbank and needed roadside assistance to get clear. Thankfully, no students or staff were injured. The two students who were on board the bus were transported back to Governor Livingston. Today's incident is why I am so very cautious when making decisions about whether or not we need to have a virtual day. As today proved, no matter how cautious I try to be, sometimes Mother Nature does not cooperate and follow the forecast. I am sure we are all finished with Winter, and that you join me in hoping that we have no more snow and an early Spring.
